

Dear Editor:

In the first decade of the 21st century we face a new reality, individually as well as collectively. The human world has become unstable and is no longer sustainable. We are experiencing ever more frequent and ever greater shocks and surprises, and these are not due to simply to blindness and ignorance. It is our reality that is shifting.

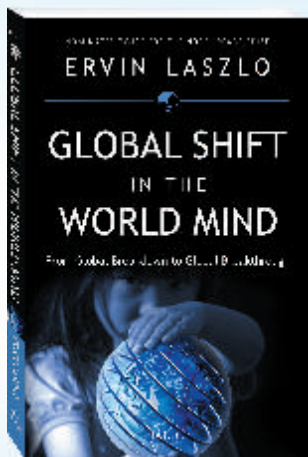

But our demise as a species, while it cannot be excluded, is by no means decided. We have enormous and as yet unexploited resources for coping with the challenges that face us. The book embraces the practical side, focused on the problems, opportunities and challenges we face, and the theoretical side, seeking the contours of the reality suggested by the latest developments in the sciences. Together, the two sides provide essential orientation for an epoch of quantum shifts.

The author shows that by understanding the interconnectedness of our changing world, long known by the world's great spiritual traditions, as well as our changing "map" of the world, we can navigate with insight, wisdom, and confidence.
